Urban Choreography/New Style/Commercial Hip Hop

The dance industry responded to hip-hop dance by creating a commercial version of it. This studio hip-hop, sometimes called "new style", is the kind of hip-hop dance seen in rap, R&B, and pop music videos and concerts. In the context of the commercial dance industry, hip-hop is choreographed urban party dancing with studio technique added to it. From a technical aspect, it is characterized as hard-hitting involving flexibility and isolations—moving a specific body part independently from others. In addition, emphasis is placed on musicality how sensitive your movements are to the music—and being able to freestyle (improvise).

Jazz-Funk/Street Jazz

Another style the dance industry created in response to hip-hop was jazz-funk. This style was shown in its early form on a sketch comedy series called In Living Color. The resident dance troupe, The Fly Girls, opened and closed every show with a hip-hop and jazz performance choreographed by Rosie Perez. Jazz-funk (also called street-jazz) is a hybrid of hip-hop and jazz dance. R&B singer Beyoncé uses this style.

Breakdance Popping & Locking (Street Dance)

Breaking was created in the South Bronx, New York City during the early 1970s. It is the first hip-hop dance style.

Breaking includes four foundational dances: Toprock - footwork-oriented steps performed while standing up. Downrock - footwork performed with both hands and feet on the floor. Freezes - stylish poses done on your hands. Power moves - Complex and impressive acrobatic moves.

Popping was created in Fresno, California in the 1970s and popularized by Samuel "Boogaloo Sam" Solomon and his crew the Electric Boogaloos. It is based on the technique of quickly contracting and relaxing muscles to cause a jerk in a dancer's body, referred to as a pop or a hit. Each hit should be synchronized to the rhythm and beats of the music.

Locking, originally called Campbellocking, was created in 1969 in Los Angeles, California by Don "Campbellock" Campbell and popularized by his crew The Lockers. The lock is the primary move used in locking. It is "similar to a freeze or a sudden pause." A locker's dancing is characterized by frequently locking in place and after a brief freeze moving again.

Other forms of Street Dance

Floating, gliding and sliding. These are lower body dances performed with little to no movements in the chest or arms.

Tutting is an upper body dance that uses the arms, hands, and wrists to form right angles and create geometric box like shapes.

Strobing, liquid and waving. In liquid, the body movement looks like water. Strobing (also called ticking) the movements look staccato and jerky.

Party Dancing

Hip-hop social dancing (party dancing). Novelty and fad dances such as the Roger Rabbit, the Cabbage Patch, and the Worm appeared in the 1980s followed by the Humpty dance and the Running Man in the 1990s. The music of the day was the driving force in the development of these dances. The TV Show Fresh Prince of Bel Air demonstrated some of these party styles.
